An update from Adrian Capogreco

2026 has been another year that has tested the Australian agriculture industry in many ways.

From seasonal variability and global uncertainty to supply chain disruptions, there has been no shortage of challenges for farmers across the country.

However, what has stood out most is the remarkable strength of our farmers. Time and time again, we've seen you adapt to changing conditions, embrace new opportunities, and continue producing some of the world's highest-quality agricultural products. It's that determination that motivates our team every day.

Nutrien is focused on opportunities that support the resilience and productivity of Australian agriculture. That's why this year we've continued to invest in our Australian operations and supply chain with the opening of our new West Coast Bulk Fertiliser facility and our East Coast Manufacturing and Distribution Centre. These investments put us in a stronger position to bring much needed efficiency and responsiveness to the Australian market.

Together, we've navigated the ups and downs of farming throughout the first half of 2026. And with Australian agriculture's impressive track record of resilience and innovation, I've got great confidence that our industry is well placed to embrace the opportunities ahead.

On behalf of everyone at Nutrien Ag Solutions, thank you for your continued support. The Nutrien Rewards Program is one small way we thank you for your partnership and loyalty. We wish you and your family every success for the season ahead.

Make Every Woody Weed Spray Count This Summer

Better wetting and penetration with Holdfast, plus greater spray visibility with Rhodamine Red Spray Marker Dye.

Summer is a key window for tackling tough weeds such as blackberry, gorse, broom, bracken, ragwort and scattered woody regrowth across grazing country.

While choosing the right herbicide is critical, effective application matters too. Tough, waxy and woody foliage can be difficult to wet, and when spot spraying large or irregular areas, it can also be difficult to see exactly where you've already treated.

Two simple additions to the spray program can help:

Holdfast Penetrant & Wetting Agent helps improve spray wetting and penetration, supporting better coverage on woody and other tough-to-wet weeds.

Rhodamine Red Spray Marker Dye provides a highly visible spray mark, helping operators identify treated areas, reduce missed patches and avoid unnecessary overlap.

Used alongside suitable herbicides and according to label directions, Holdfast and Rhodamine can help make summer spraying more accurate, visible and effective.

This summer, choose the right herbicide for the job — and, where suitable, consider Holdfast and Rhodamine Red as additions to your spray program

Always read and follow product labels. Check herbicide label directions and compatibility requirements before adding an adjuvant or spray marker.

FUELLING THE BOTS: WHY AUTONOMOUS SPRAYING DEMANDS CONSISTENT INPUTS

For Mathew Malloy, spraying across his 10,500-hectare Binya operation in New South Wales, looks a little different. A fleet of autonomous SwarmFarm robots handles much of his summer spray program, supported by an automated dock and refill station designed to keep machines moving with minimal intervention.

But autonomy brings a critical requirement: inputs must flow seamlessly.

“The current dock and refill station requires a liquid product it can measure out accurately; it can’t handle granules,” explains VICCHEM Territory Manager, Jeshua Smith. “That’s where OUTRIGHT 770 has a real fit. The exact liquid dose is administered into the water as the machine is filling.”

For Mathew, switching to OUTRIGHT 770 has streamlined his logistics.

“Since using it (OUTRIGHT), we’ve found mixing chemicals a lot easier. We’re not having to handle as many different products,” Mathew says. “It significantly reduces the number of shuttles we have to move around.”

Beyond logistics, the liquid formulation delivers practical benefits in the paddock.

“When running OUTRIGHT 770 through the sprayers, we’ve seen a reduction in crystal build-up in our filters and nozzles, which has reduced cleaning time,” Mathew notes.

In high-tech ecosystems where reliability is critical, having a consistent, easy-to-measure product from fill to fill keeps machines highly efficient and downtime low; especially in a variable climate like the one Matt is farming in.

Simplify Your Summer Spraying

Farming is tough, but herbicide application doesn’t need to be complicated. OUTRIGHT 770 spray adjuvant by VICCHEM, combines ammonium sulphate, penetrating oil, and non-ionic surfactants in one convenient liquid formulation.

Designed to simplify summer fallow spraying, it improves herbicide performance while managing variable water quality. Compatible with glyphosate and common knockdown programs, it is the dependable choice when timing matters most.

Speak to your Nutrien Ag Solutions agronomist about adding OUTRIGHT 770 Spray Adjuvant to your program.

Every season brings its share of risks.
But pest control shouldn't be one of them.

Now with double points between October and December.

Don't leave your pulse crop to chance. FMC's Vantacor® delivers long-lasting control of Helicoverpa and other damaging caterpillars, helping protect yield potential when it matters most. With strong residual activity, IPM compatibility and proven performance season after season, Vantacor® is the original choice.

Talk to your local Nutrien store about Vantacor®. For more information on how to use Vantacor®, visit ag.fmc.com/au/vantacor.

DON'T RISK IT THIS SUMMER

Dr Paul Horne and Rebecca Addison of IPM Technologies Pty Ltd share their expertise with growers at the 2026 FMC IPM workshops in Horsham

When caterpillar pressure arrives in pulse or cotton crops, confidence in your control decision matters. Yield potential, crop quality and profitability can all come under pressure when feeding damage takes hold.

That's why Vantacor® remains a trusted choice for many Australian growers and advisers. Built on Rynaxypyr® active, Vantacor® has earned its reputation through consistent performance season after season. Rapid feeding cessation helps protect crops from further damage, while strong residual activity helps keep crops cleaner for longer. The result is reliable control and confidence when crops are at their most vulnerable.

But protecting crops today is only part of the equation. Preserving valuable pest control tools for the future matters just as much.

For more than five years, FMC has invested in Integrated Pest Management (IPM) workshops across Australia's growing regions, bringing growers, advisers and independent experts together to share practical approaches to sustainable pest management. That commitment continued this year, with workshops held across key production areas.

By combining effective products with sound stewardship practices, growers can better manage pest pressure while helping maintain the effectiveness of important chemistry for the long term. Using products at the right timing, preserving beneficial insects and rotating modes of action all play a part. Vantacor® has long been an important tool within that approach, delivering effective caterpillar control while fitting comfortably within modern IPM programs.

And this season, there's even more reason to back the original. From October to December, growers can receive Double Points on Vantacor® purchases, delivering even more value from every hectare treated.

Vantacor®. The original choice. Don't risk it.

TRANSCEND[®]

DUAL BAITING SYSTEM

Targeting slaters, earwigs, millipedes, snails & slugs.

TRANSCEND®: DUAL BAITING SYSTEM MADE SIMPLE

As growers gear up for another season, effective baiting remains one of the most important early-season investments to protect emerging crops from snails, slugs and a range of insect pests.

TRANSCEND® Molluscicide & Insecticide combines molluscicide and insecticide technology in a single, durable bait. It provides broad-spectrum control of snails, slugs, earwigs, millipedes and slaters — pests that can cause heavy losses to emerging field and fruiting crops. The weather-resistant formulation not only improves reliability under wet conditions but also offers better protection of beneficial insects compared to broad-spectrum insecticide sprays.

A Better Type of Bait

Imtrade's experience in baiting spans more than two decades, starting with early bran-based metaldehyde products. Over time, research highlighted that effective control required more baits per square metre, higher active concentration and greater durability.

"To maximise control, growers and agronomists need a quality bait, longevity in wet and dry conditions, high palatability to target pests and high efficacy. These combined attributes allow a single bait to deliver an effective lethal dose multiple times," explains Imtrade CropScience National Broadacre Category Manager, John Barbetti. TRANSCEND, with its high concentration and durability plus greatest bait count on market (100,000 bait points per kg), ensures consistent pest contact and extended field life, even in challenging conditions.

Economic and Environmental Benefits

Mr Barbetti says TRANSCEND also brings efficiency and sustainability benefits that resonate with modern farming programs.

"Because TRANSCEND has a higher bait count per kilogram of bait, we save on transport, handling, storage and usage costs. All of these are extra benefits for the reseller and end user," he says. "Essentially, we are handling more product gram for gram for a cheaper price, while reducing our carbon footprint."

Proven in the Field

Registered across a range of broadacre and horticulture cropping situations, TRANSCEND has been widely adopted by growers across Australia. "Having the ability to incorporate the control of all these pests within the existing snail and slug control management plan in a single application has major economic savings for growers," Mr Barbetti adds.

Get Ahead This Season

With spring and summer rains triggering pest activity, timing is everything. Early, consistent baiting with TRANSCEND ensures emerging crops are protected from the start.

Talk to your local Nutrien Ag Solutions store to discuss your baiting program and secure TRANSCEND® ahead of the season.

Summer is an ideal time to review paddock pest history and prepare an integrated baiting plan for the next planting season. Imtrade Transcend® Molluscicide and Insecticide.
